KELLERT, THE DETECTIVE, CHARGES Washington June 6 -Another substantial evidence of the friendship of Brazil for the United States appeared to-day in the presentation of Montreal. He said:

the United States. He said:

Mr. President: It is with the most pleasing feelings that I come to present you the Cabinet letter by which the First Magistrate of the Brazilian nation accredits me as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Flenipotentiary near the Government over which you wisely preside.

My personal friendly feelings for this great friendly Nation, from the contemplation of which my country and the world have derived so many lessons of progress and likerty, are identical with those of the Brazilian people and government. I shall endeaver to maintain and to stimulate the relations of good friendship, which represent to us a precious, uninterrupted tradition. It will, therefore, be on my part not only an act of obedience to the instructions given me, but also the gratification of the demands of my own conscience.

This task will, happily, be easy. The facts of history, and those of nature liseif, in addition to the deliberate will of men, found us in this situation, and will keep us in it. You were the first to raise the cry of free government, and we recall the memory of that glorious cry, although it was only given us a century later to repeat it with success. You opened and we closed the cycle of the tremendous work of liberty, which is still being carried out on the most fertile soil of the American continent. The work is long and painful; the agitation, the instability, which for you have already passed away, still rise here and there with greater or less intensity; but our faith in the final result is already acquired; the metal is heated before it is consolidated into the statue which will defy the attacks of time.

We are mutually drawn together by the two forces which exert the greatest influence upon human actions—love and interest.

Under these circumstances, Mr. President, I have no fears as to the result of the mission upon the discharge of which I enter to-day, and the sorrow which I might possibly feel at the thought that none of the glory of the success would be due to me would be amply compensated by the great advantages gained for the two nations.

In fulfilment of a special instruction of the President of the Republic, to which I venture to join my own humble sentiments, I beg you, Mr. President to be assured of the very fervent prayers which he and the Brazilian nation offer for your personal prosperity and that of the American people. The people of this Union have always held sentiments of the highest esteem for the Brazilian nation, as is shown by the friendly relations which have uninterruptedly existed between it and the Government of the United States of America, and I heartily welcome your cordinal offer of concurrence in maintaining and strengthening those relations of good friendship and promoting the mutual welfare of the two nations, whose aspirations are in many respects as similar.

A half-hour was spent in the election of officers, and then the climax of ladies' hapless haps" are interesting, news of battles and heroism is more interesting still, and the the occasion was reached with the reading of the treasurer's report. The discussion which followed stories of wronged actresses and luckless soubrettes have taken a back sea -- more accurately a lasted for two hours, and was, to say the least, back page-since war was declared. At any rate, it warm. The question raised was whether the in-stitution could be made to pay for itself or not, and is better for the public to read about Dewey and Bagley and Hobson than Tottle Coughdrop's profiton this point the trustees appeared to be about evenly divided. What was lost by the lack of any use of epithets was made up by the tones of voice able Wall Street speculations and Mademoiselle Moulin Bergere's milk baths. When the press agent wants a profitable advertisement nowadays he has to work up something patriotic, such as the offer to the President by his client of her diamonds used. Some of the trustees seemed to regard themselves as a meddlesome body, who seriously interfered with good instruction, and the question was raised. "What are the trustees for, anyway?" was raised. What are the trustees lot, anyway? Coal bills and gas hills were discussed da cape and ad infinitum. When the men left the building, after 11 o'clock, they continued to hold forth on the

When he reached a point where he thought that the Governors of the Carolinas, if present, might like to try a stroil on the promenade, he dropped the curtain. Some of the scenes were extremely pretty, and so were the costumes. Edward Girard displayed amusing skill as a clown, and Miss Josephine Hall was provided with a part which was clearly intended to allow her to continue her success of "The Girl from Paris." The song which suggested "Slater Mary Jane's Top Note" drew forth some requests for repetitions, but not so many as the cider song used to do. NEARLY COST HIM HIS LIFE.

(Copyright: 1898; The Associated Press.) Key West, Fla., June 6 .- The steamer Fanita, formerly of the Clyde Line, which sailed from Mobile on May 24, in a suspicious manner, concealing her destination, arrived here early this afternoon. She was well down in the water and fully loaded apparently. Her captain and crew refused to make any statement whatever regarding the trip further than that the Fanita sailed from Mobile with a general cargo, discharged it and had now called at Key West for orders. It was learned later from a reliable source that the Fanita had taken a cargo of arms and ammunition, with several tons of dynamite, from Mobile, and that so far from being engaged in penceful and legal traffic, she had been for two weeks on a fillbustering expedition.

From Tampa the Fanita was ordered to Mobile estensibly to take an expedition to Cuba, under the charge of Generals Jimenes and Morrillo, both Dominicans, but strong sympathizers with the movement for Cuban independence. The Fanita's cargo was taken on board, and in the night, with the two generals, a captain and another officer, slipped out to sea without exciting suspicion.

On the afternoon of May 25 she was sighted and halled by an American warship in Gulf waters. An ensign was sent aboard the Fanita to examine her papers and inquire as to her destination. He was told that she was bound with supplies for the insurgents, and she was allowed to proceed. Her voyage after that was uneventful, until she reached Great Inagua, where the expedition was met and joined by "Chris" Roberts, an expert pilot, well acquainted with the Cuban coast.

A hurried consultation took place between Rob-erts and General Jimenes, and the Fanita's captain was ordered to steer for Port de Paix, Hayti, it being unsafe to land in Cuba. Shortly after a Spanish gunboat was sighted cruising along the coast, but she took no notice of the Fanita, despite the fact that she was then almost within the threemile limit

Port de Paix was reached in safety and General Jimenes went ashore and sent dispatches. On his return he ordered the Fanita to Cape Haytien. There General Jimenes again went ashore, returning to the ship with ten men, who, he told the captain, were laborers engaged by him to unload the cargo as soon as the vessel reached Cuba. added that his advices were still to the effect that it was unsafe to land an expedition in Cuba just yet, and that he desired to touch at Monte Cristi, San Domingo, where important news was awaiting Monte Cristi was reached on Thursday, June 2 On casting anchor the captain was surprised to see General Jimenes come on deck in uniform and fully armed, followed by General Morrillo and the other two officers, similarly equipped. thirty-seven rifles and two cases of ammunition to be put aboard the long boat that was to row them ashore, and then commanded the ten alleged laborers to take their seats in the boat. "Chris" Roberts remained on board the Fanita.

The captain understood that something was wrong; but he was reassured by Roberts and General Jimenes, and, shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning, the boat was rowed ashore by three sallors and the second mate of the Fantta.

No sooner had they reached the wharf, where General Jimenes and his party landed, than a voiley of musketry was heard and three of the men fell wounded. The first to fall was General Morrillo, pierced through the breast by a bullet. were seen advancing in large numbers, and the little band of fourteen was soon cut down to five.

The sailors in the Fanita's boat shoved off from the wharf amid a rain of bullets. General Jimenes jumped into the boat just in time, and, seizing an joined the crew in pulling for dear life. The last that was seen of the landing party was the figures of two men, covered with blood, their clothing torn from their backs, struggling desperately against superior odds in the face of blasing mus-

General Jimenes reached the Fanita in safety and none of the crew were injured. The captain hotsted the boat, and, without losing a moment's time, put to sea. Later he headed for shore, and landed Jimenes and Roberts on Friday. He then returned here with his entire dargo.

The captain refused to make a statement, but evidently he was imposed upon, and knew nothing of the true character of the expedition.

CLASS DAY AT COLUMBIA.

EXERCISES IN THE GYMNASIUM AND AT BARNARD, FOLLOWED BY DANCES IN THE EVENING.

With the baccalaureate sermon preached in Havemeyer Hall on Sunday by the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke opened the celebrations of Columbia University's first commencement week on Me side Heights. Yesterday was class day, and as was devoted to the festival of the senior class of the academic department and of Barnard ollege. In the forenoon the seniors spent their time on the field in such nerve-testing sports as throwing the tack hammer, the egg race and the 160-inch dash, and in the afternoon their regula-tion class day exercises were held in the gym-

The sudden death of her husband was a great blow to Mrs. Rooker, who was only a few years his junior. Miss Fuller was in constant attend-ance upon her sister last night. Several friends to-day's primaries between the machine and anti-machine Republicans for the election of delegates called to offer their sympathy and condolence. be held on Friday. The Rev. Dr. Charles R. Baker, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Messiah, will conduct the service. Mr. Rooker was a vestrymen of this church, and had attended it for fifteen or twenty years. He formerly attended the old St. Ann's Church.

Thomas Newberry Rooker was born in the city of Hudson, Columbia County, this State, on December I, ISIA Some nine years later his father removed, with his family, to the village of Lyons, Wayne County, N. Y., which was the home of Myron Holley, one of the first commissioners of the Eric Canal. Mr. Holley induced the senior Mr. Rooker to take up his residence in Lyons, and there exected for him a large building, which Mr. Rooker to take up his residence in Lyons, but not for many years. His intense love for horses induced him to neglect his school whenever he could get a horse to ride. Other puntshment having been tried in vain, the boy was finally placed as a driver on the Eric Canal. He worked all summer, neither he nor his father receiving any pay. That ended his school days.

The village printing office at Lyons always exercised a great fascination over the boy, and he visited it frequently. After three or four years in Lyons, the elder Mr. Rooker became afflicted with a disease known at that time as Exyptian store eyes, and lost his sight. Then, with his family, he of the control to seed to delegates in about one-third of the Assembly District, where the lodgest the hottest first the hottest first the hottest first the theory of Amass Thornton, the former machine forces in the KNVth Assembly District, where the followers of Amass Thornton, the former machine forces in the KNVth Assembly District, where the followers of Amass Thornton, the former machine forces in the KNVth Assembly District, where the followers of Amass Thornton, the former machine forces the the KNVth Assembly District, where the followers of Amass Thornton, the former machine fleader. a disease known at that time as Egyptian sore eyes, and lost his sight. Then, with his family, he removed to Albany. There an uncle of Thomas Rooker was employed as pressman in the office of "The Daily Advertiser," and the youth became a roller-boy. In his spare moments he learned to set roller-boy. In his spare moments he learned to set type, and ere long he was promoted to be "devil." This meant that he ran errands, made fires, swept the office, carried papers and set type. He was a great favorite with the foreman and the men, and was often employed by the foreman to aid him in his duties. When about nineteen years old he was asked by his employers to accept the foremanship, a vacancy having been caused by resignation.

Thinking he youth a bar, Mr. Rooker at first declined the after, but later accepted it on the unanimous request of his fellow-employes.

This place Mr. Rooker held until the sale of the paper led to a reorganization of the force. About this time he was married. Then he went to Troy. where he was employed on "The Evening Mail." In a few months he became foreman. After eighteen months in Troy he came to this city and worked as a compositor in various offices. Early in 1841, hearing that Horace Greeley intended to issue The Tribune, he applied for a position on it. On April 9, 1841, he was one of those who began to lay and set the type for the first number of the paper, which was dated April 10. Three years later Mr. Greeley made him foreman, and he retained this place until the summer of 1877, when, at his own request, he was relieved of his active duties and virtually placed on the retired list.

After a month of idleness Mr. Rooker applied for active work in some department. The cashier's office needing help, Mr. Rooker was assigned there. He had been secretary of The Tribune Association continuously since 1868, and had always been a trustee. He owned one share of the original stock, issued in 1849, and was, just prior to his death, the only man connected with The Tribune who had orked on its first issue. At the annual meeting of the stockholders of The Tribune Association, held January 18, 1897, when Mr. Rooker was re-elected secretary and a trustee, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Thomas N. Rooker has within the last month completed the eighty-first year of his life, and is now approaching the completion of the fifty-sixth year of his continuous service on The Tribune; and sixth year of his continuous service on The Tribune; and Whereas, He begins to feel the pressure of advancing age, and asks to be retired from active duty, subject, as he says, to call in any emergency; therefore.

Resolved, That The Tribune Association expresses to Mr. Rooker its appreciation of his amiable and blameless life, its high sense of the value of his long and faithful service, and its best wishes for his continued health and happiness.
Resolved, That, on April 9, 1897, the name of Thomas N. Rooker be transferred from the list of active Tribune employes, where it was placed on April 9, 1841, but that one-half of his present salary be continued for life.

Lamphier, founder of the Fulton Street Noonday Prayer-Meeting. One of the dead man's nephews, Dr. Frederick Z. Rooker, is secretary to the Apostolic Delegate.

Mr. Rooker was a member of the Society of Old Brooklynites, an. was a Republican, although he took little part in politics.

ROSSITER S. SCOTT. Baltimore, June 6 (Special).—Rossiter S. Scott, for forty-eight years a member of the Baltimore Stock Exchange and well known in financial circles, died to-day, at the age of seventy. He succeeded his father as the head of the banking and brokerage farm of Townsend Scott & Son. In the last three years his eldest son, Townsend Scott, has taken his place, and in a few years the firm will round out a century of existence. Mr. Scott belonged to one of the oldest Quaker families in Maryland. He leaves a wife and five children.
